DETAILED ACTION

The following office action is in response to the Amendment and Response dated June 14, 2004.

No claims were amended or cancelled.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Moon (US 6,085,098) in view of Eisen et al (US 5,523,754).

As to independent claim 1, Moon discloses a method for providing a mobile terminal with a software keyboard proper for the language of a country where it is located in a mobile communications network providing global roaming (col. 1, lines 10-15, col. 2, lines 3-6), comprising the steps of;

Moon discloses in col. 2, lines 17-28, where the software application settings are dependent on certain geographical location information, including determining a current geographical location for the device or setting a default location. Eisen et al disclose in col. 1, lines 7-10, a method and apparatus for automatically reconfiguring a keyboard input device to support the appropriate language. Further, in col. 2, lines 54-61, Eisen et al disclose a gateway server (item 28) which links to a LAN. The LAN stores a plurality of documents or resource object within a storage device (item 20). Moon in combination with Eisen et al fully disclose a mobile terminal with automatically reconfiguring of software applications depending upon the location of the mobile device. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to combine Moon with Eisen et al as both systems relate to input devices where the software is automatically reconfigured to support appropriate language and/or location.

As to independent claim 4, limitations of claim 1, and further comprising, a recording medium. Moon discloses, in col. 3, lines 58-65, a microprocessor with RAM and ROM. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art that a microprocessor includes memory for storage.

As to dependent claim 2, limitations of claim 1, and further comprising, where in including the step of transmitting the information on another software keyboard requested to the mobile terminal instead of the software keyboard proper for the country where it is located (col. 4, lines 36-43).

As to dependent claim 3, limitations of claim 2, and further comprising, including the step of canceling the transmitting of the information on the software keyboard on the user's request (col. 4, lines 19-43).

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed June 14, 2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

4. In response to applicant's argument that the examiner's conclusion of obviousness is based upon improper hindsight reasoning, it must be recognized that any judgment on obviousness is in a sense necessarily a reconstruction based upon hindsight reasoning. But so long as it takes into account only knowledge which was within the level of ordinary skill at the time the claimed invention was made, and does not include knowledge gleaned only from the applicant's disclosure, such a reconstruction is proper. See In re McLaughlin, 443 F.2d 1392, 170 USPQ 209 (CCPA 1971).

5. In response to applicant's argument that there is no suggestion to combine the references, the examiner recognizes that obviousness can only be established by combining or modifying the teachings of the prior art to produce the claimed invention where there is some teaching, suggestion, or motivation to do so found either in the references themselves or in the knowledge generally available to one of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Fine, 837 F.2d 1071, 5 USPQ2d 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1988) and In re Jones, 958 F.2d 347, 21 USPQ2d 1941 (Fed. Cir. 1992). In this case, Moon et al disclose where software applications are dependent upon geographical information. Eisen et al disclose a method and apparatus where the software application is reconfigurable with regards to the keyboard input device to support the appropriate language. Moon et al is combinable with Eisen et al as both systems relate to input devices where the software is automatically reconfigured to support appropriate language and/or location. Thus, the above rejection is maintained and made final.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37

Art Unit: 2675

CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
